the aim of these notes is to offer a modern picture of the perturbative approach to the calculation of intermolecular forces the point of view taken is that a perturbative series truncated at a low order can provide a valuable way for valuating interaction energies especially if one limits oneself to the case of intermediate and long range distances between the interacting partners although the situation corresponding to short distances is essentially left out from our presentation the problems which are within the range of the theory form a vast and important class a large variety of phenomena of matter in fact depends on the existence of interactions among atoms or molecules which over a substantial range of distances should be classified as weak in comparison to the interactions occurring inside atoms or molecules we are aware of the omission of some topics which in principle could have been included in our review for instance a very scarce attention has been paid to the analysis of problems involving interacting partners in degenerate states which is of particular relevance in the case of interactions between excited atoms only a rather quick presentation of the formal apparatus of degenerate perturbation theory is included in chapter iii interactions involving the simultaneous presence of more than two atoms or molecules
