this anthology raises the issue on current empirical and theoretical research approaches in the field of didactics in respect to diversity gender and new media the intention is to show the related contemporary use and the reflections on didactic approaches based on the tradition of allgemeine didaktik the brainchild to use english as publication language pursues the idea to make the concept of didactics accessible for the english speaking world the attempt is to mirror differences of provisions in current societal phenomena new media gender and diversity which educational institutions are facing it will reveal and demonstrate that this is a common issue which is to be addressed for satisfying the demands and necessities in today's schooling out of the national educational perspectives given through the different educational systems this anthology follows the idea to present approaches with their theoretical or empirical results thus the reader will find a bunch of procedures suggestions and methods as well as critical questions shaped by the empirical and theoretical reflective work of the norwegian austrian us american and german authors who contributed to the book

this book gathers a series of studies by scholars who have dedicated these last few years to research in the field of participatory democracy their purpose is precisely to engage in a theoretical discussion about the value of participatory democracy in the 21st century part i deals with the challenge of antipolitics this is one of the greatest challenges faced by contemporary democratic theory how can it be possible to take into account in political decision making processes those whose voices issue disagreement with the available alternatives in the exact same political decision making processes without simply excluding them provisionally from democratic participation part ii focuses on challenges to deliberative systems deliberative democracy is probably the most important alternative conception of democracy in today s available literature on the topic insofar as it responds to a sort of general uneasiness with mere preference aggregation by majoritarian voting and instead seeks to incorporate the vast spectrum of heterogeneous interests in modern societies in the search for mutually acceptable policies however it is also subject to specific theoretical challenges that must be overcome if it is to be taken seriously as a viable alternative for providing better conditions of political participation part ii deals with some of those challenges even if in a sympathetic attitude towards deliberative decision making finally part iii approaches pluralism and cultural diversity in a shared public space its main challenge consists in promoting an idea of active citizenship that can meet the demands of a world increasingly defined by the processes of globalization ultimately that is what will end up combining a valid notion of active citizenship with effective decision making procedures in pluralistic democracies more than a simple summary of research challenges to democratic participation is designed to be accessible and useful to a wide variety of audiences from scholars and practitioners working in numerous disciplines and fields to activists and average citizens who are interested in seeking a theoretical groundwork for democratic practices it also intends to enhance current scholarship serving as a guide to existing research and identifying useful future research crises have long been a recurring feature of european integration in many cases further steps toward integration have only been possible under the pressure of such crises however in recent years the eu has faced multiple overlapping crises at times calling the integration process itself into question in 2015 the eurozone crisis escalated to the point where for the first time a member state faced the possibility of exiting the eurozone at the same time the massive influx of refugees into the eu exposed significant shortcomings in both the schengen area and the common asylum policy finally the british referendum on 23 june 2016 resulted in a majority vote in favor of brexit marking the first ever departure of a member state from the eu against this backdrop the 12th network europe conference examined the numerous challenges facing the eu as well as potential future scenarios for european integration the publication includes contributions from andré s berne jelena ceranic perisic viorel cibotaru alex de ruyter ivana kunda tobias lock lee mcgowan peter christian müller graff tatjana muravska and attila vincze network europe was founded in 2003 by the europa institute at the university of zurich with support from the swiss government it serves as a forum for scholarly exchange on legal and political aspects of european integration bringing together researchers from across europe the euphoria evidenced in the aftermath of the collapse of communist regimes in the late 1980s and early 1990s sometimes conveyed the impression that the process of democratization would be achieved without difficulty or tribulation this book sets out to provide a thorough comparative analysis of the challenges which face the emerging democracies of central and eastern europe and considers the impact of political change drawing heavily on available survey data the book provides an in depth account of how the new democracies of central and eastern europe have coped with four major challenges political fragmentation nationalism lack of respect for human rights and poorly developed civil service systems the book demonstrates that although the first few years of the 1990s were marked by increasing disenchantment with the new regimes the change of governments as a direct result of the electoral process and the prospects for european integration have served to reverse this negative trend indeed the authors find that the new political systems have managed to cope with the challenges so effectively that striking similarities with western democracies are now apparent offering new insights into democratic transition challenges to democracy will appeal to political scientists diplomats and policymakers and economists with an interest in european and comparative politics
