it is inevitable that the prevailing ideology of a nation whether overtly or covertly will predetermine a mono cultural language and literacy syllabus unless multicultural activists and ethnic minorities make their voices heard through the public media the purpose of literacy is not just to find a job literacy is the vital key to an intelligent participation in self government by multicultural democracy david myers think of the benefits that could arise if westerners began to make an effort to learn from the rich pool of knowledge stored in the languages of australia and the pacific instead of ignoring them or destroying them at a time when western technology society and philosophy are in an almost permanent state of crisis solutions from outside philosophical systems may be particularly important peter muhlhausler this book interrogates politics and practices of multiculturalism and multicultural education in contexts where liberal and critical multiculturalism is under pressure it examines and interrogates perspectives on multiculturalism and the political and social to diversity in societies in asia and europe it is set against a background of increasing right wing radicalism and pervasive authoritarianism in different parts of the world these ideologies not only undermine multiculturalism but the potential of democracy itself the book includes chapters from leading scholars on multiculturalism interculturalism and diversity around the world it examines the challenges to multicultural diversity in the global north and makes a distinctive contribution by addressing this issue in the global south societies of asia including myanmar china and pakistan as such this book opens up international debate about multiculturalism by providing exchanges rarely heard across borders this book explores race and multiculturalism in malaysia and singapore from a range of different disciplinary perspectives showing how race and multiculturalism are represented how multiculturalism works out in practice and how attitudes towards race and multiculturalism and multicultural practices have developed over time going beyond existing studies which concentrate on the politics and public aspects of multiculturalism this book burrows deeper into the cultural underpinnings of multicultural politics relating the subject to the theoretical angles of cultural studies and post colonial theory and discussing a range of empirical examples drawn from extensive original research covering diverse practices such as films weblogs music subcultures art policy discourse textbooks novels poetry which demonstrate overall how the identity politics of race and intercultural interaction are being shaped today it concentrates on two key asian countries particularly noted for their relatively successful record in managing ethnic differences at a time when many fast developing asian countries increasingly have to come to terms with cultural pluralism and migrant diversity multiculturalism is now seen by many of its critics as the source of intercultural and social tensions fostering communal segregation and social conflicts while the cultural diversity of contemporary societies has to be acknowledged as an empirical and demographic fact whether multiculturalism as a policy offers an optimal conduit for intercultural understanding and social harmony has become increasingly a matter of polarised public debate this book examines the contested philosophical foundations of multiculturalism and its often controversial applications in the context of migrant societies it also explores the current theoretical debates about the extent to which multiculturalism and related conceptual constructs can account for the various ethical challenges and policy dilemmas surrounding the management of cultural diversity in our contemporary societies the authors consider common conceptual and empirical features from a transnational perspective through analysis of the case studies of australia canada columbia germany new zealand the united kingdom and uruguay this book will be of interest to students and scholars of political science comparative politics international studies multiculturalism migration and political sociology this volume explores the different ways that ethnic and religious diversity is conceptualized and debated in south and east asia in the first few decades following decolonization talk of multiculturalism and pluralism was discouraged as states attempted to consolidate themselves as unitary and homogenizing nation states today however it is widely recognized that states in the region must come to terms with the enduring reality of ethnic and religious cleavages and find new ways of accommodating and respecting diversity as a result many countries are now debating policies to accommodate minorities including recognition of indigenous rights minority language rights consociational power sharing regional autonomy and multination federalism this is often described as a key ingredient in any process of democratization in the region one manifestation of this new ethos is the growing rhetoric of multiculturalism often imported from the west and indeed western models of minority rights have had an influence in many asian countries often promoted by international organizations however asian societies also have their own traditions of peaceful coexistence amongst linguistic and religious groups all of the major ethical and religious traditions in the region from confucian and buddhist to islamic and hindu have their own conceptions of tolerance and their own recipes for sustaining unity amidst diversity these traditions continue to shape people's beliefs and practices in the region even the distinctive conception of marxism developed in the region provides an influential perspective on these issues not found in the west the rhetoric of multiculturalism may be ubiquitous around the world but it is being used to express quite different ideas and norms using both case studies and thematic essays this volume examines the pre colonial traditions colonial legacies and post colonial ideologies that influence contemporary debates on multiculturalism in the region it explores the areas of convergence and divergence between these different perspectives and the extent to which they provide viable frameworks for managing ethnic and religious diversity in the region
