the second century bce was a time of prolonged debate at rome about the changing nature of warfare from the outbreak of the second punic war in 218 to rome s first civil war in 88 bce warfare shifted from the struggle against a great external enemy to a conflict against internal parties this book argues that rome s italian subjects were central to this development having rebelled and defected to hannibal at the end of the third century the allies again rebelled in 91 bce with significant consequences for roman thought about warfare as such these rebellions constituted an italian renewal of the war against their old conqueror rome and an internal war within the polity accordingly we need to add internal war to the already well established dichotomy of foreign and civil war this fresh analysis of the second century demonstrates that the roman experience of internal war during this period provided the natural stepping stone in the invention of civil war as such it conceives of the period from the second punic war onward as an antebellum period to the later civil war s of the late republic during which contemporary observers looked back at the last great war against hannibal in preparation for the next conflict
