the discipline of phenomenological psychopathology has historically focused on elucidating the ways in which persons with psychiatric illnesses experience themselves and the world early pioneers in this field were aware of the impact of uncontrollable life events on the onset and course of severe illness such as jaspers recognition that environmental events may stimulate or enhance certain innate potentialities for the development of a disorder furthermore the role of environment and life events in the development and onset of psychiatric illness has been well documented for example there is a clear relationship between the development of psychotic symptoms and life stressors including adverse childhood events urban living and migration however relatively little attention with some notable exceptions has been devoted to exploring the features of those experienced worlds and how they may impact the trajectory of severe illnesses such as schizophrenia depression and personality disorders this book engages the problem of how in the 21st century we are to speak about experiences of the extraordinary anomalous extreme which occur on a transhistorical and transcultural basis critical readings of seminal texts show how 20th century theoreticians in the humanities sought to erase madness from their irrational subjects this propensity to sanitize madness in the study of religions was mirrored by the instinct of psychiatrists to degrade religious experiences by reducing mad consciousness to psychosis or dissociation richard saville smith introduces explanatory pluralism as a way of recognizing these disciplinary biases and mad studies as a way of negotiating this understanding the disproportionate significance of madness in shaping the fabric of the human story can then be recovered from both erasure and dismissal to be given the recognition previously denied as acute religious experiences acute religious experiences divides into three sections beginning with re readings of william james's pathological programme, rudolf otto's numinous, t. k. oesterreich's possession, mircea eliade's shamanism, walter stace's mysticism, walter pahnke's psychedelic experience and abraham maslow's peak experiences. These ideas are shown to constitute the beginnings of a fractured discourse on the irrational. In part two, contemporary psychiatry's diagnostic and statistical manual (DSM) and foucault's history of madness are re-read to reposition madness as not necessarily pathological. This opens the way for the identification of acute religious experiences as a new holistic and post colonial approach through which religious data can be organized and addressed on a comparative basis. In part three, the gospel of mark is re-read as a case study to demonstrate the novel insights which flow from the identification of acute religious experiences. richard saville smith draws on his own experiences of madness and his PhD from the school of divinity at the university of edinburgh to elucidate his research.
