the lost generation of the first world war were boys who had barely left school before they found themselves living in trenches drowning in mud and living in constant fear of death this unique collection of letters from a group of schoolboys who attended bournemouth grammar pays tribute to these boys who barely had the chance to become men bournemouth s grammar school was founded in 1901 tragically all boys who were pupils there in its first decade grew up to be of fighting age in the bloodiest war in history ninety eight of them were killed averaging about one death every fortnight throughout that conflict however it was not all unrelieved blood and slaughter life was hard but often full of interest and surprise many of them wrote back to tell their much respected headmaster to tell him of their wartime adventures collectively these letters provide a wide spectrum of the great war we read of young men enjoying trying to catch rats in the trenches winning bets on how long it would take to rescue a tank from no man s land playing footer amid the gunfire and singing ragtime in a rickety new fangled aeroplane while rocking the machine in time to it this is the voice of the lost generation hartenian s history of george w bush propaganda for an invasion of iraq returns the administration s approach to its conceptual origins hartenian places evidence in the center of his analysis showing that rumsfeld s the absence of evidence is not evidence of absence meant that no evidence was necessary to justify an invasion the 9 11 attacks indeed changed everything for the bush administration and in its aftermath the time for regime change in iraq had simply come with no good evidence to support its fears the administration was certain of a post 9 11 conceived iraq al qaeda nexus just as with no evidence except the absence of evidence it was certain of iraqi mastery of denial and deception that hid saddam s evil activities resting on cheney s one percent doctrine administration certainty of the threat from iraq required a us invasion the policy offices of douglas feith at the pentagon with the help of george tenet at cia would generate a case of such fright and enormity the mushroom cloud that required administration action manipulating intelligence and ignoring the growing body of evidence undermining its case the bush administration invaded iraq to bring about regime change
