presenting several in depth studies this book explores how super diversity operates in every day relations and interactions in a variety of urban settings in western europe and the united states the contributors raise a broad range of questions about the nature and effects of super diversity they ask if a quantitative increase in demographic diversity makes a qualitative difference in how diversity is experienced in urban neighborhoods and what are the consequences of demographic change when people from a wide range of countries and social backgrounds live together in urban neighborhoods the question at the core of the book is to what extent and in what contexts super diversity leads to either the normalization of diversity or to added hostility towards and amongst those in different ethnic racial and religious groups in cases where there is no particular ethno racial or religious majority are certain long established groups able to continue to exert economic and political power and is this continued economic and political dominance actually often facilitated by super diversity with contributions from a number of european countries as well as the usa this book will be of interest to researchers studying contemporary migration and ethnic diversity it will also spark discussion amongst those focusing on multiculturalism in urban environments this book was originally published as a special issue of ethnic and racial studies few books have ever made their presence felt on college campuses and newspaper opinion pages as quickly and thoroughly as richard arum and josipa rokso s 2011 landmark study of undergraduates learning socialization and study habits academically adrift limited learning on college campuses from the moment it was published one thing was clear no university could afford to ignore its well documented and disturbing findings about the failings of undergraduate education now arum and rokso are back and their new book follows the same cohort of undergraduates through the rest of their college careers and out into the working world built on interviews and detailed surveys of almost a thousand recent college graduates from a diverse range of colleges and universities aspiring adults adrift reveals a generation facing a difficult transition to adulthood recent graduates report trouble finding decent jobs and developing stable romantic relationships as well as assuming civic and financial responsibility yet at the same time they remain surprisingly hopeful and upbeat about their prospects analyzing these findings in light of students performance on standardized tests of general collegiate skills selectivity of institutions attended and choice of major arum and rokso not only map out the current state of a generation too often adrift but enable us to examine the relationship between college experiences and tentative transitions to adulthood sure to be widely discussed aspiring adults adrift will compel us once again to re examine the aims approaches and achievements of higher education much hand wringing has occurred over the so called failure of young people to grow up today this volume persuasively shows the range of forces that shape the protracted transition to adulthood an excellent and enjoyable read deborah carr professor of sociology rutgers university and editor of the encyclopedia of the life course and human development the essays in this volume are written with great verve and intelligence grounded in extensive fieldwork and careful data analysis frank furstenberg professor of sociology in the population studies center at the university of pennsylvania how low income people cope with the emotional dimensions of poverty could a lack of close meaningful social ties be a public rather than just a private problem in social poverty sarah halpern meekin provides a much needed window into the nature of social ties among low income unmarried parents highlighting their often ignored forms of hardship drawing on in depth interviews with thirty one couples collected during their participation in a government sponsored relationship education program called family expectations she brings unprecedented attention to the relational and emotional dimensions of socioeconomic disadvantage poverty scholars typically focus on the economic use value of social ties for example how relationships enable access to job leads informal loans or a spare bedroom however halpern meekin introduces the important new concept of social poverty identifying it not just as a derivative of economic poverty but as its own condition which also perpetuates poverty through a careful and nuanced analysis of the strengths and limitations of relationship classes she shines a light on the fundamental place of core socioemotional needs in our lives engaging and compassionate social poverty highlights a new direction for policy and poverty research that can enrich our understanding of disadvantaged families around the country
