first published in 2004 the span of time when most of Britain was under Roman influence stretched from 55 BC to c AD 500 when control had passed into the hands of Germanic peoples many of whom had been living here already for over a century as troops or allies of the Roman army five and a half centuries is a considerable portion of our national history if one counts back from today it brings one to about 1440 at the end of the Middle Ages a period totally remote from our present world this revised edition takes into account aerial archaeology and major rescue excavations this book provides an authoritative new narrative of the Roman conquest of Britain from the two campaigns of Julius Caesar up until the construction of Hadrian's Wall it highlights the motivations of Roman commanders and British resistance fighters during a key period of Britain's history the story of the Claudian conquest of Britain was only partly recorded by ancient historians Tacitus' Annals breaks off at the death of Tiberius while the narrative of Cassius Dio survives only as a collection of selected pieces much of this missing knowledge has been recaptured by archaeological research as a result we have a better understanding of the tribal society which then existed in Britain and this can help us to appreciate the courses of military action open to Aulus Plautius the commanding Roman general there are other important military factors which would have affected Plautius' choice of options logistical geographical political in this innovative and much acclaimed study John Peddie argues that the organisation and supply problems of a task force of some 40 000 men and several thousand animals would broadly have dictated Roman tactics he discusses what these may have been examines the reasons for Vespasian's seemingly isolated foray into the west country and suggests that Caratacus' guerrilla campaign AD 43-52 denied the Romans their hope of a speedy conquest in this landmark study an amateur historian tackles the unanswered questions surrounding Julius Caesar's time in Britain two thousand years ago Julius Caesar came saw and conquered southern Britain but exactly where he landed and the precise routes his army marched through the south of the country have never been firmly established. Numerous sites have been suggested for the Roman landings of 55 BC and 54 BC yet remarkably the exact locations of the first major events in recorded British history remain undiscovered until now. After years of careful analysis, Roger Nolan has painstakingly traced not only the places where the Romans landed but he has also discovered four temporary marching camps Caesar's army built as it drove up from the south coast in pursuit of the British tribal leader Cassivellaunus. This advance took Caesar across the Thames to Cassivellaunus's stronghold at Wheathampstead in present-day Hertfordshire. These marching camps are placed almost equidistant from each other and most importantly are in a straight line between the coast and Wheathampstead. Roger Nolan's research has also enabled him to identify the place mentioned in Caesar's commentaries where the Roman legions were ambushed by the British while foraging and where a large battle then ensued, the first known land battle in Britain. Without doubt, this groundbreaking study is certain to prompt much discussion and reappraisal of this fascinating subject.
